

BY JOHN H. OBERLY & CO.

CAIRO, ILLINOIS, NOVEMBER 22, 1870.

ONLY DAILY PAPER IN EGYPT.

The Bulletin. TUESDAY.

Work on the Chester and Tamarac railroad is progressing favorably.

SENATOR Yates is getting well again. His diet, as usual, consists of pickled cabbage.

The longest fence in the world is that which encloses the Illinois Central railroad. It is 1,400 miles long.

THE voters of Saline county decided by a majority of over two hundred votes that the county court continue to license grog shops.

JONATHAN MEEKER, Democrat, is elected to the Legislature from Moultrie county, instead of McGuire, Republican, as previously reported.

JOSEPH HOLT, a valuable employee of the Vandalia railroad company, was killed by the cars at Effingham on Friday last. We are sorry that so clever a company should lose so good a Holt.

THERE is very little doubt but that the Radical members of Congress from Virginia will insist upon Judge Rives, the defeated candidate in the Fifth district, contesting the seat of the Conservative member who was elected.

A boy in Jerseyville swallowed a pint of strong lye the other day, mistaking it for elder. The verdict of the coroner's jury, shortly afterwards, was to the effect that the boy died, because "he couldn't stand the lye."

A WASHINGTON correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer says: President Grant informed Senator Wilson that he was not in the least concerned about the Revenue Reform Party, and as for the Chicago Tribune, in his opinion, that paper had long ago abandoned the Republican party, and was, therefore, without influence in the country.

THE question now being discussed at Washington, is shall we go into a war that will cost two hundred thousand lives and a thousand million dollars for the purpose of collecting from England a debt of fifty million dollars which England has not refused to pay.

Two girls in Carlinville tied up their father, last week, whilst he was in a state of intoxication, and did not unbind him until he promised to join the Good Templars. There would be an extraordinary demand for ropes if the women of Paducah should attempt to reform the masculines by a like procedure.

JOHN A. LOGAN declares, and A. J. Kuykendall agrees, that papers like the Cairo BULLETIN that have the courage to expose the corruption of Radical officials, should be suppressed and the editors imprisoned! Will Mr. Logan, as a representative of the Radical party, introduce a bill in Congress for a law to that effect? If such a law ought to be passed, why will Mr. Logan not originate it?

THEY have none of this divorce bather in India. If she doesn't behave he kicks and cuffs her into obedience; if he finds that to be too exhausting to his physical system, he holds her out at arm's length, and repeats three times the talismanic words, "You are divorced." No provision is made for any misbehavior on the part of the husband, because that is supposed to be impossible.

It is said that the late fair at Centerville was a failure in a pecuniary point of view. The expenses exceeded the receipts about $2,000.

We hope this untoward experience will not discourage our neighbors. No agency is more powerful in the work of developing the agricultural and horticultural resources of Southern Illinois than that employed by the citizens of Marion county. The $2,000 that was paid out to meet the excess of expenditures will be returned ten-fold in the improved methods of farming, in the improved stock, fruit and grain, of Marion county. And this gratifying return will be realized before the next fair is held.

SCHENCK is going to contest the election of Lewis D. Campbell, on the ground that an Ohio court did not overrule a law of that State! The Radicals of course expect that Congress, which is the judicial tribunal known as the Radical court of appeals, will overrule the decision of the Ohio court, and declare the Ohio statute which keeps so important a protectionist as Schenck out of Congress, to be null and void.

THE course of Senator Wilson, who declared his opposition to the assessment of clerks in the government service for party purposes, creates considerable comment among the officials on slender salaries who were elected previous to the recent elections. They assert that Wilson's opposition to the attack upon their income comes too late to do any good and is only manifested because of the fact that the sentiment in Massachusetts is opposed to that business, and the supposition that he intended it would defeat him for re-election.

By the completion of the Belleville and Southern Illinois railroad, citizens of Cairo have choice of five routes to St. Louis, viz: via Mississippi river, Iron Mountain railroad, Illinois Central and Ohio and Mississippi railroads; I. C. and Ashley and St. Louis railroad, and I. C. B. & S. I. railroads. On the 1st of December lightning trains will be placed on the latter route, which will enable our citizens to take breakfast at home, take dinner in St. Louis and tea at home. It is expected that the run between Cairo and St. Louis will be made in six hours.

CHARLIE FARWELL, the Radical Congressman from the First district in this State, is making his office pay, even before he gets his certificate of election. The Chicago Tribune says that Congressman Farwell "won in wagers upon his own election, ten thousand dollars over and above all his campaign expenses." Farwell must have spent, according to all accounts, about one hundred thousand dollars to elect himself, which shows that he has already made as Congressman $110,000.

The New York World publishes a revised list of the members elect of the next national house of representatives in which the revenue reform Republicans are separately designated. The political complexion of the next house will, according to this, be as follows: Democrats.....109 Republicans, Protectionists.....105 Republicans, Revenue Reformers.....29 The combined majority of the Democrats and revenue reform Republicans is 33; enough to organize the house and control the committees in the interest of tariff reform.

MR. SCHOMBURG, Mayor of Donaldsonville—an appointee of Governor Warmouth, and a Republican—and Mr. William C. Lawes, a lawyer, residing at the same place. The latter was a Democrat and much respected by all who knew him.

There can be no doubt that these gentlemen were murdered by armed negroes without a pretext, and while engaged in a most humane and public-spirited mission. Mr. Schomburg was shot in the region of the heart. Mr. Lawes was also killed by bullets, his body being afterwards horribly mangled by case knives.

ACCORDING to a Washington dispatch the President's friends say that he has become imbued with Gen. Butler's theory, namely: That the only salvation of the "Republican party" now lies in getting up a war with England, and that the first step in the programme is to recall Motley in a manner that needs explanation, and then to send out a man who will force a crisis on the fishery question. Our opinion of Mr. Grant is not high, but we do not think so meanly of him as to believe he cogitates this cold blooded atrocity. He is a soldier, and consequently does not love war as Butler does.

MRS. LIVERMORE, of the Woman's Journal looks to a reorganization of the political parties of the country as a step preliminary to the success of the woman-suffrage movement. She says that she has little hope that either the Democratic or Radical party, as at present constituted, will embody a woman-suffrage plank in their platform. The old lady's hate of the Democratic party crops out so plainly that we are disposed to believe that she actually fears that that party will espouse the cause for which she expresses such a devotion.

The Radical party has held undisputed control of the general government during the past ten years, and its representatives in Congress have studiously avoided any act or the expression of any word calculated to commit them to woman's suffrage. On the other hand the only women voters in America were enfranchised by the Democratic legislature of the Democratic Territory of Wyoming, and the only plea in that behalf ever heard in the halls of Congress was uttered by a Democratic congressman. Hence it is highly probable that Mrs. Stanton's prediction that the women will owe their enfranchisement to the Democratic party, will sooner or later be fulfilled. Can't Mrs. Livermore read the signs of the times, or won't she?

CARL SCHURZ.

The Future of the Radical Party.
It is reported in the Washington correspondence of several journals, that Senator Schurz, now at the Federal capital, has contradicted the rumors that he favors the formation of a new party with revenue reform as its cornerstone. He avows his intention to remain with the Republicans and seek to accomplish necessary reforms through that organization. A statesman with views so clear and settled will of course act upon his own independent judgment. We have few men in public life of so much culture, philosophy and courage, as the eloquent Senator from Missouri, and we cannot say that we dissent from his opinion as to the expediency of bringing a new party into our national politics. Third parties are commonly a mere make-weight. They are often composed of skulking allies of one or other of the great political organizations. We are not surprised that it does not suit Senator Schurz's manly temper to go into anything but a frank and open fight. Nor do we presume to advise him respecting his personal or party relations. While we should be glad to see his gifts and eloquence on the Democratic side, we respect his judgment as to what may be due to his antecedents and character.

On one point we are confident that he is mistaken. He will be necessarily disappointed in the expectation of carrying revenue reform and other liberal measures through the Republican party. If its leaders were all as sagacious and far-seeing as he is, they would of course adopt his programme, and take the wind out of the Democratic sails. His policy would not overtake popular intelligence and the force of truth; but he does not make due allowance for the political effect of the thousands of millions of capital embarked in manufactures. The wealthy monopolists who plunder the people by the tariff, know full well that they have nothing to hope from the Democratic party. The whole weight of their influence will be thrown into the Republican scale; and the money they can afford to spend, added to the corrupting patronage of the administration, will keep the Republican party steady to the protectionists' interest. The old issues have worn out and lost their potency, and the Republican party will not, in its declining strength, strange as powerful a body of supporters as the high-tariff men, its natural allies.

But we feel no haste or anxiety to dispel the conflicting illusions of the "revenue reformers." Time and the progress of events will do that work, more effectually than any arguments offered at this stage of the discussion. We have accordingly made up our minds that there is no better rule for the conduct of Democrats towards the revenue reformers than Prior's excellent advice for the treatment of a wife: "Use her as she likes."

When they have fully tested the impossibility of liberating the tariff through the Republican party, we are willing to trust their own judgment as to the surest method of accomplishing their favorite reform. Meanwhile, true to our motto, "let them have a fair better chance of success, and a more pronounced identity of interest, than coming from Democrats." The whole hearted physician, but they that are sick! Democrats are already free-traders and do not need conversion. The great field for missionary effort is inside the Republican party. Nothing could work better for the cause than a body of zealous free trade apostles, whose arguments reach those who need to be convinced, and are not blunted by their party prejudices against the reasoners.

The French Sentiment.
Under the head of "The French Sentiment" the Monitor Universal publishes an article in which it observes: "It is not, as many foreign journals are pleased to state, because we are possessed by a ridiculous infatuation respecting our strength, an incurable national vanity, or an incomprehensible warlike mania, that we are not disposed to make peace at the cost of two great suicides. Not. And it is particularly necessary that Europe should at this time correctly understand the feeling of France. The nation deeply regrets the outbreak of this war, the nation has a horror of war! France, which is always in advance in the progress of ideas, feels that the time for human hecatombs is past, and there is not of the youthful volunteers, or of the national guard, who to-day are marching against the enemy, resolved to conquer or die, who does not look upon war as a social absurdity, a savage anomaly, and who is not determined in his inmost heart to make this war the last."

So long inflict upon the Prussian armies reverses such as they have not hitherto experienced. But even if we had reason to apprehend further disasters for France, ought we therefore, to be more eager to profit by the first opportunity for making peace. On the contrary, Peace made now would, in all probability, be badly made and it is especially because we do not desire to renew the war that we must not have an imperfect peace. The peace which is to be signed must be one of European disarmament, not one of armed watchfulness. That is what is said by our peasants and our artisans, by great and small, by men and women—men who feel that they are born for something else than objects for slaughter, women who after today yielding their husbands and brothers to the demon of war, are not disposed tomorrow to surrender their souls upon the bloody field of battle. Let there be no mistake. The war has no chance in respect of its object as it has of its character. That which we are now defending, the integrity of our territory, the national independence, is the cause of civilization and of liberty. To understand this point thoroughly, it is sufficient to notice that the men who in the Corps Legislatif were most strongly opposed to the maintenance of standing armies and large contingents, the men who in July last voted against the war and who are now at the head of the government are the least disposed to accept a deceptive peace, and now are the most persistent in their declaration. Not an inch of our territory. Tomorrow, perhaps, and if not to-morrow, certainly not long hence, the statesmen of Europe will examine this question of peace. Let them not lose sight of the preceding observations, nor of the real meaning of our resistance."
